28. Comments
As Frederick continues to grow, so too does the need for a true community theater arts hub. Imagine a place where performance groups rehearse; where mainstage and blackbox productions from FtP encourage local playwrights and bring mainstream medium- and large-scale musical productions to the Frederick community; where youth theater classes engage families and young audiences while lighting ablaze the creative passions of children who have an outlet to perform and learn the dramatic arts; where students and adults interested in theater can learn about stage management, set design and building, lighting and sound; and where the residents of Frederick know they can turn to keep arts alive in the community through productions performed by and for the Frederick community. Every challenge is an opportunity and FtP seeks to rise from the dark marquis of the pandemic strong, secure, well-positioned to be a bedrock in the Frederick community for the years to come. This vision could be a reality if The Fredericktowne Players receive state arts funding sufficient to acquire a permanent space in Frederick, Maryland.
