FISCAL AND POLICY NOTE

House Bill 282 (Delegate Costa)
Judiciary

Family Law - Peace Orders and Protective Orders - Shielding

This bill repeals statutory provisions that require a respondent to file a request and the court to hold a hearing before court records relating to a peace order or protective order proceeding at which the petition for the order was denied or dismissed at the interim, temporary, or final stage may be shielded. Instead, the bill requires the court to order the shielding of related court records within five business days after the denial or dismissal.

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: General fund expenditures for the Judiciary increase by $26,000 in FY 2015 only for programming changes to the Judiciary’s computer system. Otherwise, the Judiciary can handle the bill’s requirements with existing resources. The elimination of hearings related to shielding requests does not materially impact the workload of the Judiciary.

Analysis

Current Law: Court records, including those relating to a peace order or protective order proceeding that are maintained by a court, are presumed to be open to the public for inspection. Generally, a custodian of a court record must permit a person, upon personal appearance in the custodian's office during normal business hours, to inspect the record. Subject to certain exceptions, a court record that is kept in electronic form is open to inspection to the same extent that a record in paper form is open to inspection. However, a respondent in a peace order or protective order proceeding is authorized to file a written request to "shield" all court related records if a petition for a peace order or protective order was denied or dismissed at any stage of the proceedings.

"Shield" is defined as removing information from public inspection. "Shielding" means:

- with respect to a record kept in a courthouse, removing to a separate secure area to which persons who do not have a legitimate reason for access are denied access; and
- with respect to electronic information about a proceeding on the website maintained by the Maryland Judiciary, completely removing all information concerning the proceeding from the public website, including the names of the parties, case numbers, and any reference to the removal of the proceeding from the public website.

A request for shielding may not be filed within three years after the denial or dismissal of the petition, unless the respondent files a general waiver and release of all the respondent's tort claims related to the proceedings. The court must schedule a hearing on the shielding request and provide notice of the hearing to the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney of record.

After the hearing, the court must order the shielding of court records relating to peace order or protective order proceedings if the court finds (1) that the petition was denied or dismissed at the interim, temporary, or final order stage of a protective order or peace order proceeding; (2) that a final protective order or peace order has not been previously issued against the respondent in a proceeding between the petitioner and the respondent; (3) that there is not a pending interim or temporary protective order or peace order issued against the respondent for a proceeding between the petitioner and the respondent; or (4) there is not a pending criminal charge against the respondent arising from alleged abuse against the petitioner.

However, the court may, for good cause, deny the shielding if the petitioner appears at the hearing and objects to the shielding. In determining whether there is good cause to grant the request to shield court records, the court must balance the privacy of the respondent and potential danger of adverse consequences to the respondent against the potential risk of future harm and danger to the petitioner and the community.

Information about the proceeding may not be removed from the domestic violence central repository. However, attorneys of record, law enforcement and social services personnel, and others specified are not prohibited from accessing a shielded record for a legitimate reason. Other individuals may subpoena or file a motion for access to a shielded record. If the court finds that the individual has a legitimate reason for access, the court may grant access to the shielded record and determine how access may be obtained. The court must balance the person's need for access with the respondent's right to privacy and the potential harm of unwarranted adverse consequences to the respondent that disclosure may create.

Within 60 days after entry of a shielding order, each custodian of court records subject to the order of shielding must advise the court and the respondent of compliance with the order in writing.

Before granting, denying, or modifying a final protective order, a court must review all open and shielded court records involving the person eligible for relief and the respondent, including records involving criminal matters and domestic violence and peace order proceedings. However, the court's failure to review records does not affect the validity of a protective order that is issued.

Background: The Judiciary's website includes a link to "CaseSearch." CaseSearch provides public Internet access to information from case records maintained by the Judiciary. Maryland District Court traffic, criminal, and civil case records and circuit court criminal and civil case records are available. Records can remain in CaseSearch indefinitely and are not removed except by a court-ordered expungement.

According to the Judiciary, between October 1, 2010 (the effective date for Chapters 361 and 362 of 2010 which established the shielding provisions) and January 15, 2014, 3,076 requests for shielding were filed in the District Court and 258 requests were filed in the circuit courts. During that time, the circuit courts granted 119 shielding requests and denied 40 requests. The District Court granted 2,156 requests and denied 816 requests.
