11. Description and Purpose of Project (Limit length to visible area)

To conduct necessary repairs to the Historic Annapolis Museum and Store located at 99 Main Street. The scope of the project was identified using a local consultant in 2016, and a subsequent federally-funded analysis in 2017. Initial estimates for repairs were $90,000, but more significant issues (i.e. water leaks, failing roof, HVAC system and masonry) were identified in 2017 with an est. cost of more than $200,000. If these issues are not resolved now they will pose a safety hazard to the public, and escalate to even more costly repairs in the future. Historic Annapolis is eager to complete these repairs because in addition to serving as one of the premier anchor retail stores on Main Street, the building will also be serving as the primary location of HA's upcoming permanent exhibit, "A History of Annapolis," that will serve as a hub for promoting Annapolis as a tourism destination.

Round all amounts to the nearest $1,000. The totals in Items 12 (Estimated Capital Costs) and 13 (Proposed Funding Sources) must match. The proposed funding sources must not include the value of real property unless an equivalent value is shown under Estimated Capital Costs.

28. Comments

The building located at 99 Main Street plays a vital role in the heritage tourism economy of Annapolis and provides visitors and residents with a historic treasure of great significance. The permanent exhibit "A History of Annapolis" that is schedule to be installed at 99 Main Street in 2019 will play an important role in telling the stories of Annapolis, creating connections to partner organizations, drawing hundreds of thousands of visitor in the future, and creating new educational opportunities for local residents and school children.

The building at 99 Main Street was built in 1791 by German immigrant Frederick Grammar and used by merchant Lewis Neth to house his store for many years. It replaced an earlier building that served as Richard Fleming's bakehouse until it was destroyed by fire in 1790. In the decades that followed, additions were made and the building was converted to residential use. In the 1950s, a structural wall was accidentally demolished at 99 Main Street, and the city ordered that the building be razed. A group of Historic Annapolis board members formed Port of Annapolis, Inc. (as part of Historic Annapolis, Inc.) to purchase the property and finance its restoration and adaptive reuse. Preservation of this prominent dockside property marked the beginning of the restoration of the Annapolis waterfront. Restoration was completed in 1960, and the site served a series of retail shops over the next 30+ years. The latest phase in the life this historic building began with a 2004-06 project to transform it into a preservation and education center. Today, 99 Main Street home to the Historic Annapolis Museum & Store and is open year-round to the public offering a first floor retail shop, exhibitions on the second and third floors, and minimal staff office space. It is ADA equipped with elevators, ramps and bathrooms and is also a contributing resource to the Annapolis Colonial Historic District.

Historic Annapolis serves more than 100,000 visitors each year (50,000-70,000 at the Historic Annapolis Museum and Store) through a variety of educational activities and public events. The organization is governed by a Board of Trustees, employs approximately 50 full and part-time staff members, and benefits from the service of more than 1,000 volunteers and the support of over 1,100 members.
