Analysis

Current Law: A person is guilty of reckless driving if a motor vehicle is driven in wanton or willful disregard for the safety of persons or property or in a manner that indicates a wanton or willful disregard for the safety of persons or property. A violation is a misdemeanor, subject to a maximum fine of $1,000. The Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) is also required to assess six points against the driver's license upon conviction for this offense. The District Court prepayment penalty, including court costs, is $510 for this offense.

A person is guilty of negligent driving if the motor vehicle is driven in a careless or imprudent manner that endangers any property or the life or safety of any individual. This violation is a misdemeanor, subject to a maximum fine of $500. Upon conviction, MVA must assess one point against the driver's license, or three points if the offense contributes to an accident. The District Court assesses a prepayment penalty of $240 for this offense or $280 if the offense contributes to an accident.

State Expenditures: General fund expenditures for the Judiciary increase by $194,100 in fiscal 2022 for one-time programming changes to the Judicial Information System to reflect the bill's changes.

The District Court can otherwise handle additional must-appear offenses with existing resources. For context, the District Court advises that, in fiscal 2019, 5 citations were issued for reckless driving violations involving accidents resulting in death and 23 citations were issued for negligent driving violations involving accidents resulting in death. Citations issued for such violations totaled 11 and 27, respectively, in fiscal 2020.
