House Bill 1260
Appropriations

(Delegate P. Young, et al.)

Military Service Credit - Eligibility

This bill allows a member or vested former member of the State Police Retirement System (SPRS), Law Enforcement Officers' Pension System (LEOPS), or Correctional Officers' Retirement System (CORS) to earn military service credit even if that member or former member receives service credit for the same military service under another retirement system. However, a member may not receive military service credit from the State more than once. The bill takes effect July 1, 2022.

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: State pension liabilities and contributions increase minimally in FY 2025, potentially by about $1.1 million and $96,200, respectively. Employer contributions are assumed to be allocated 60% general funds, 20% special funds, and 20% federal and other funds. To the extent that law enforcement officers are more likely than the general population to have retired from the U.S. Armed Forces, the fiscal effect may be slightly greater. No effect on revenues.

Local Effect: Negligible increase in local participating governmental units' (PGUs) pension liabilities, and no discernible effect on local employer contributions due to the small number of affected members in the PGU pool. No effect on local revenues.

Small Business Effect: None.

Analysis

Current Law: In general, any member or vested former member of the State Retirement and Pension System (SRPS) who accrues 10 years of service as a member of any State plan may receive one year of additional service credit for each year of active military duty performed prior to membership in SRPS, up to a maximum of five years. That credit is granted at no cost to the member or former member and is applied using the accrual rate in effect when the member or former member submits an application for the credit to the State Retirement Agency (SRA).

However, SRPS members or vested former members who claim credit for the same military service from another retirement system may not receive military service credit from SRPS, unless they claimed credit for that military service from:

- Social Security;
- the National Railroad Retirement Act; or
- National Guard or military reserves pensions (Title 3 or Title 10 of the U.S. Code).

This generally means that any SRPS member receiving a military pension after completing 20 years of active military service cannot claim the military service credit from SRPS.

State Expenditures: SRA, the Military Department, and the Personnel Unit within the Department of Budget and Management do not have reliable data on the number of State employees with prior military service nor data on the number who have retired from the military and are receiving a military pension. Therefore, a reliable estimate of the number of SRPS members who would be eligible to claim military service credit under the bill cannot be determined.

However, using a variety of data sources, and for illustrative purposes only, the Department of Legislative Services estimates that about 20 current active members of the three affected plans may be eligible for military service credit under the bill. As shown in Exhibit 1, the General Assembly's consulting actuary identified 811 active members in the three affected plans who fit the profile of individuals who could be eligible to claim additional service credit. These individuals are generally at least age 50 and, therefore, could have served 20 years in the military (beginning at age 20) and earned 10 years of service credit in SRPS, making them eligible for the military service credit. The U.S. Department of Defense advises that approximately 56,000 military retirees live in Maryland, which is 2.5% of the State's population age 50 or older. Assuming the same percentage of SRPS members identified by the actuary in that age group are military retirees, approximately 20 SRPS members may be eligible for five years of military service credit. To the extent that individuals in law enforcement roles may be more likely to have served in (and retired from) the military, the number of affected individuals may be greater.

To receive the service credit allowed by the bill, eligible members of CORS, SPRS, and LEOPS must submit a claim for the military service credit. As the bill takes effect July 1, 2022, any credit provided is recognized, at the earliest, in the June 30, 2023 actuarial valuation, which determines employer contribution rates for fiscal 2025. Thus, any fiscal effect begins in fiscal 2025 at the earliest. This analysis does not include current members who have not yet earned 10 years of credit but may reach that threshold in the future and, thus, be eligible to claim five years of credit.

This analysis can only determine the increase in pension liabilities and employer contributions if a “typical” member of each of the major SRPS plans claimed an additional five years of service credit. Since the bill applies only to individuals with a 20-year pension, it is assumed that they all claim the maximum five years of credit allowed by the State. Exhibit 2 shows the costs for one member of each plan claiming the service credit allowed by the bill; these costs would increase annually according to actuarial assumptions. For illustrative purposes only, if the estimated 20 members earn the military service credit at a weighted average liability of about $55,000 and a weighted annual cost of approximately $4,800 per member, total State pension liabilities increase by about $1.1 million, and employer contributions (all funds) increase by approximately $96,200 in fiscal 2025.

As the military service credit allowed by the bill counts toward both eligibility and creditable service, some affected members may retire earlier than they otherwise would because of the additional eligibility service credit they receive. Early retirements can increase pension liabilities because benefits are paid over a longer period; however, this analysis does not address the fiscal effects from earlier retirements.
