House Bill 557 (Delegate Holmes)
 Environment and Transportation

Residential Owners in Common Ownership Communities - Bill of Rights

This bill creates a bill of rights for residential owners in a common ownership community (COC), applicable to members of cooperative housing corporations, unit owners of condominiums, and lot owners in homeowners associations (HOAs).

Fiscal Summary

State Effect: General fund expenditures for the Office of the Attorney General (OAG) increase by $266,100 in FY 2026 for staff; future years reflect annualization and inflation. Revenues are not affected.

(in dollars)	FY 2026	FY 2027	FY 2028	FY 2029	FY 2030
GF Expenditure	266,100	317,300	331,400	346,200	361,000
Net Effect	($266,100)	($317,300)	($331,400)	($346,200)	($361,000)

Note:() = decrease; GF = general funds; FF = federal funds; SF = special funds; - = indeterminate increase; (-) = indeterminate decrease

Local Effect: The bill is not anticipated to materially affect local government operations or finances.

Small Business Effect: Potential meaningful.

Analysis

Bill Summary: The bill establishes a bill of rights for residential owners in a COC. The rights are subject to the provisions of all applicable laws governing COCs established in the State, and, among others, include the right to:

- be represented by the governing body of the COC and to have the governing body consider the priorities of all residential owners when approving a budget and managing the community's facilities and open space;
- vote (1) by secret ballot to elect the membership of the governing body for the COC and to be a candidate in fair elections administered by neutral parties, with results that can be verified by an audit on request; (2) to recall an incumbent member of the governing body; (3) on specific financial matters, if permitted in the governing documents of a COC; and (4) on new capital projects proposed by the governing body, if permitted in the governing documents of a COC and by referendum;
- use all facilities and services of the COC at a reasonable cost that does not exceed half the cost charged to eligible users who are not residential owners in the COC;
- have a COC governing body and community manager that (1) are properly trained and indemnified; (2) are stewards of the COC's interests; (3) are protective of the rights of residential owners in the community; (4) provide residential owners due process and equal protection; and (5) comply and function in accordance with State law and governing documents;
- fair treatment if charged with a violation of the governing documents, including the opportunity to (1) be notified in writing about the nature of the violation; (2) present evidence and cross-examine witnesses at proper hearings; and (3) abate the violation within a reasonable period;
- receive timely access to documents of the COC, including the ability to inspect and copy such documents;
- receive prompt and nondiscriminatory service from the staff and governing body of the COC;
- individual privacy by the governance and management of the COC; and
- have the Consumer Protection Division (CPD) of OAG (1) review an alleged violation of State laws that govern COCs and (2) take direct enforcement action on behalf of a residential owner, including by acting to receive an adjudication of the matter before a court or the imposition of penalties by OAG.

The rights established under the bill may not be construed to deny or detract from other rights that may be retained by residential owners in a COC.

Current Law: Generally, current law does not specifically enumerate explicit rights to residential property owners of COCs. Condominiums, HOAs, and cooperative housing corporations are typically operated in accordance with their respective governing documents (bylaws, declarations, etc.). However, existing statutory provisions do set forth procedures, authorizations, and requirements regarding the operations of COCs that impact owners in such communities, including those related to (1) meeting requirements; (2) fidelity insurance requirements; (3) notice requirements for specific meetings;

(4) warranties; (5) requirements related to bookkeeping and access to specific records; and (6) procedures for specific dispute resolution.

For more information on condominiums, cooperative housing corporations, and HOAs, commonly known as COCs, see the Appendix – Common Ownership Communities.

State Expenditures: The bill establishes a right for each residential owner in a COC to have OAG (through its CPD) review alleged violations of State law that govern COCs and take direct enforcement action. Given the additional responsibility of reviewing complaints and potential enforcement, as well as the number of individuals in the State who live in COCs, OAG requires additional staff. This analysis assumes that the bill likely generates a volume of complaints that supports the need for one assistant Attorney General, an investigator, and a mediator. Accordingly, OAG general fund expenditures increase by $266,138 in fiscal 2026, which accounts for the bill’s October 1, 2025 effective date. This estimate reflects the cost of the staff needed to assist in the review of complaints, provide mediation between parties, and enforce violations of State law regarding COCs. It includes salaries, fringe benefits, one-time start-up costs, and ongoing operating expenses.

Positions	3.0
Salaries and Fringe Benefits	$244,032
Operating Costs	22,106
Total 2026 State Expenditures	$266,138

Future year expenditures reflect full salaries with annual increases and employee turnover as well as annual increases in ongoing operating expenses. To the extent that a significant volume of complaints is received, additional staff may be needed in future years; expenditures associated with potential additional staff are not accounted for in this analysis.

The bill is not anticipated to materially affect the workload of the courts.

Small Business Effect: Potential meaningful, particularly to the extent that complaints regarding COCs are reviewed and enforced by OAG.

Appendix – Common Ownership Communities

When a person purchases a single-family home, condominium, or an interest in a cooperative housing corporation, the person may also be required to join an association of owners, which is intended to act in the common interests of all the homeowners, condominium unit owners, or cooperative owners in the community. Collectively, these associations are often referred to as common ownership communities (COC). In Maryland, a growing number of newly constructed or newly converted residences are located in some form of a COC. Because registration of the various COCs is not required statewide, the exact number of COCs in Maryland is unknown. However, the Foundation for Community Association Research estimated that there were 7,100 community associations with an estimated 1.0 million residents in these associations in the State in 2023.

The affairs of a condominium are governed by a council of unit owners, which comprises all unit owners. Among other powers, the council of unit owners has the power to impose assessments on the unit owners to pay common expenses. A council of unit owners may delegate its powers to a board of directors, officers, or a managing agent. Condominiums are governed under Title 11 of the Real Property Article.

Many new housing developments are subject to a homeowner's association (HOA) that is created by a governing document and has the authority to impose mandatory fees on lots in the development in connection with the provision of services or for the benefit of the lots, the lot owners, or the common areas. HOAs are governed under Title 11B of the Real Property Article.

A cooperative housing corporation or "cooperative" is a corporation that owns real property. A resident of a cooperative does not own an individual unit; instead, the person owns an interest in the corporation, which leases the unit to the person for residential use. Cooperatives are governed by the laws in Title 5, Subtitle 6B of the Corporations and Associations Article.

Condominiums and HOAs may be authorized by their governing documents to impose liens on units or lots to collect unpaid assessments or fees. In a cooperative, the governing documents usually provide for the collection of delinquent fees, and evictions for outstanding fees are generally pursued by way of a landlord-tenant action.

Task Force on Common Ownership Communities

With a growing number of Marylanders residing in COCs and evidence that some COCs had issues with governance, dispute resolution, and financial stability, the General Assembly created the Task Force on Common Ownership Communities in 2005 (Chapter 469 of 2005). The issues addressed by the task force included the availability of alternative dispute resolution services, special considerations of aging COCs, collection of assessments, and resale of homes within COCs. The task force met 10 times, held five public hearings, and submitted its final report in December 2006. The report's findings and recommendations have served, in subsequent years, as the basis for numerous pieces of legislation intended to improve the operation of COCs.

The task force's report also featured findings and recommendations relating to the creation of an ombudsman in local governments. While a small number of local governments (Charles and Montgomery counties) created such offices before the report's publication, some local jurisdictions have since created programs to regulate or provide oversight of COCs. For example, Prince George's County created its Common Ownership Communities Program in 2007 to assist governing bodies, as well as owners and residents of HOAs, residential condominiums, and cooperative housing corporations, with education, training, and alternative dispute resolution.
